GOVERNORS.

Since our last issue there have been no changes on the Governing Body, which remains as follows:—

The Lord Bishop of Southwell (Chairman).
The Very Rev. the Provost of Southwell (Vice-Chairman).
The Ven. Archdeacon Hacking	} Cathedral Canons.
Rev. Canon Field
W. H. Mason, Esq.	} Notts. County Council.
C. G. Caudwell, Esq.
Dr. J. F. D. Willoughby
A. Straw, Esq.	} Southwell Rural District Council.
W. A. James, Esq.
J. H. Kirkby, Esq.	} Southwell Parish Council.
A. G. Merryweather, Esq.
Professor H. L. Brose, University College, Nottingham.
Dr. P. E. Shaw, St. John's College, Cambridge.

STAFF.

The following changes have taken place in the year:—

Mr. F. H. G. Percy joined the Staff in September, replacing Mr. W. Gorin. Mr. Percy came from Whitgift School, Croydon, and Oriel College, Oxford, and has so closely identified himself by now with all our activities that introduction would be out of place.

Mr. C. A. Holbard was appointed to Letchworth Grammar School in July. We congratulate him on his appointment. Apart from his work in the Laboratory and with enthusiastic biologists in the open, Mr. Holbard ran the Rifle Club and did great work as scenic artist in our Hamlet production.

His place will be taken by Mr. T. S. Harrison, B.Sc., of Gainsborough School and East London College. Mr. Harrison represented the University in Cross-Country events. We extend a welcome to him.

We congratulate Mr. B. J. Rushby Smith on his engagement to Miss Van Slooten, of Gröningen, Holland.

The Head Master had the privilege of taking part as one of the English dancers in the great International Folk Dance festival at the Albert Hall, London, in July. It was a great occasion when teams of eighteen European nations came together to dance their traditional dances.

THE SCHOOL.

We congratulate E. C. Dodd on his passing the London Matriculation, and A. Caudwell and H. Hurst on the result of the School Certificate Examination.

The numbers during the year have been: Autumn, 78; Spring, 82; Summer, 78.

We acknowledge with thanks the receipt of The Brunts School Magazine, The Nottinghamian, The Pavior, The Centaur, The Newtonian, and The Magnusian.

Speech Day.

Speech Day was held in the Great Hall of Bishop's Manor on Thursday, November 8th. The Bishop took the chair and called upon the Head Master to give his report of the School's activities during the year.

The substance of this report, which covers the work of the School in 1933-34, has already appeared in The Southwellian.

Mr. Matthews welcomed the Provost as their visitor, the first occasion on which a Provost of Southwell had officiated ; it was only fitting he should be there in that capacity in the year of Southwell's Jubilee.

The Head Master prefaced his report with observations on the value of the intimate nature of work in a small school and proceeded to indicate the character of that work.

The School was up to its maximum numbers, and he took occasion to warn parents that the School could no longer accept entrants over twelve, unless they were fully capable of profiting by a secondary school education.

After referring to the high standard of mathematics, the Head Master appealed for a wider use of the boys' opportunities in general reading.

The report concluded with a review of all the School's activities, in and out of school, its Old Boys' Association, its loyal Staff work, and its opportunities for the future.

THE FAMILY TOUCH.

The Bishop afterwards said this annual gathering of the Minster Grammar School parents and friends was always a very pleasing one. There was a sense of informality, and a family touch about them. On no other occasion was there such a sense of freedom from responsibility. He felt less responsible on this occasion, because one thing he had not had to do was to introduce a distinguished speaker and giver of prizes. The Head Master had told them he had not to introduce the speaker, and not sing his praises. It was said that a prophet was not honoured in his own country. But unlike many prophets, the Provost, who was giving away their prizes that day, was approved of and very much loved, and of course it was a most suitable thing in every way that in this particular year, this Jubilee year of the diocese, that they should not get an outsider, no matter how distinguished, when they had their Provost, to whom the whole diocese really owed a debt of gratitude for the magnificent way he organized all those services and gatherings in the Minster in the summer. (Applause.)

Therefore in that Jubilee year who else could they get on such an occasion but the Provost of Southwell, and he had the greatest possible pleasure in introducing him and asking him to present the prizes. (Applause.)

The prizes were then handed to the successful scholars by the Provost.

THE "STOP-GAP."

In his subsequent address the Provost began by saying it was a great privilege for him to stand before them as prize-giver, but he felt sorry for them. He did assure them he did his best to secure someone else. The Bishop had most kindly made the best of a bad job, and he (the speaker) felt flattered and grateful for what the Bishop had said of him. So here he stood, the stop-gap ! (Laughter and applause.) The one redeeming feature was that he did feel he was making history, for as the Head Master and the Bishop had pointed out, never before had a Provost of Southwell stood there in that capacity.

But when he thought of the distinguished men of letters who had given away the prizes, he was all the more abashed and diffident to speak on that occasion. He had especially in mind their last year's visitor, Professor Stewart, an outstanding scholar, soldier and educationalist. As he stood there last year he (the Provost) ventured to think very few of them realized what wonderful work he had done as a soldier in the thick of it at Gallipoli. Little did they think that he who had begun such fine work as Principal of Nottingham University College would so soon be touched by the sudden hand of death.

"I am glad he came and showed his interest in and care for us before it was too late," continued the Provost. "And I am glad his words which he then spoke are perpetuated in the pages of your school magazine. I hope you all read them. You will remember how he, a Scot, told us of the Scotch zeal for education, such a zeal as England has never had, and warned us of the possible danger of caring most for the brainiest bairn.

A HEALTHY MIND AND BODY.

"And now what I am to say to you," proceeded the Provost. "I am not a visitor, but a neighbour and friend. Perhaps we know one another a bit too well. (Laughter.) I cannot speak as a wholly disinterested person, far from it, the desire for the welfare of your school is in my very bones. (Applause.) What is my idea of a school? It should be a place where you find a right sense of proportion. I came across a highly efficient school the other day, and I was full of admiration, when someone said, 'If you think a school is a workshop—well there you are!' Should a school be a workshop? I doubt it. Work of course there must be, but in proportion, and that is what I find here. You all know the thread-bare saying, absolutely true, of course, about my old school—the battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton—and there is a far older saying, 'mens sana in corpore sano'—and what about 'all work and no play'? There is truth in all this and no doubt you would agree that what you do on the top ground is as important as what you do in the classroom. To have a sense of proportion is most important in every bit of life and especially in education, and that I find, is the way this school is run in regard to work and play.

"Well then in this school there is a degree of freedom, startling to some folk, side by side with strict discipline. I want to suggest that a proper use of freedom is an absolutely essential part of education. Bishop Creighton once said, 'freedom means men wish to do things for themselves instead of having things done for them.' In these days freedom is at stake in more than one country, and it is of paramount importance that English boys and girls should learn how to preserve that special gift of England to mankind—freedom. (Applause.)

"So then I find in this school a right sense of proportion with regard to work, play, discipline and freedom.

SCHOOL AND HOME.

"As on this occasion we have the very special pleasure of seeing many parents may I suggest that the school can never take the place of home. Throughout his time here the boy has the background of his home. On that background the pattern has to be embroidered and if the threads are weak or rotten, the pattern is bound to suffer. There again a sense of proportion is needed, so as to secure home life and school life in one perfect whole. A parent cannot hand over his responsibility entirely to the schoolmaster. The holidays count along with the term-time in the formation of character. So there again there is need for a right sense of proportion.

"Again education means the training of the whole personality and in modern education the tendency is to ignore one whole side of a boy's being, his spiritual side. The great public schools which have done so much for England, have all found their centre in their place of worship. The school chapel is still, and it always was, an essential part of the school life. I naturally think first, of Henry VI, how he built first his school at Eton and then his College at Cambridge, and in each case provided magnificently for divine worship by building Eton School Chapel and King's College Chapel—the Chapel in which your Head Master used to sing. (Applause.) But Henry VI was by no means alone in this, he was but following others, and in all our great public schools you will find religion provided for in the Chapel, the centre of all school life.

"And here in Southwell we find that sense of proportion preserved, in that religion is not left out or made a kind of side-show. You cannot think of the Grammar School without the Minster, and I cannot think of the Minster without the Grammar School. (Applause.) The two stand or fall together. This school is a religious foundation. It is in fact just that which gives it its own special character and atmosphere. There again I find a right sense of proportion.

THE FUTURE.

"What of the future? The future is going to bring considerable educational developments here in Southwell. Lowe's Wong is, as everyone knows, to be the scene of a new county senior school in course of time. I look forward, and I seem to see in the future an infants' school at Holy Trinity—a re-constructed junior school by the Recreation Ground—and the new senior school on Lowe's Wong—and side by side with them an essential spoke in the educational ladder—our ancient

Grammar School, continuing as a boarding school and a choir school, which none of the other schools can ever be, carrying on its unbroken life of centuries, still doing its special part in education in this county, still enabling the best music to be rendered in the Minster, still providing for the whole boy in body, mind and spirit. (Applause.)

" You have an inspiring past. Since our last prize-giving, after the Archbishop of Canterbury had been welcomed by Mr. Metcalfe, as representing the Parish Council, he saw some of you looking on. Most kindly he seized the opportunity spontaneously to speak to you, and that was a high honour. He called attention to the fact that you have very few rivals in antiquity. He placed you along with the schools he knew so well at York and Canterbury. That was a high honour and I hope it will stimulate you to see to it that the future is no less inspiring than the past. (Applause.) As present scholars you have your part to play to that great end, and as old boys will you join the Southwellians' Society and show your love for the old school by upholding its traditions and furthering its interests in every way you can ? " (Applause.)

Professor P. E. Shaw, Nottingham, proposed a vote of thanks to the Provost, but before doing so referred to the Head Master's report and said how overwhelmed he had been both in that speech, and on reading The Southwellian Magazine, to see the variety of work, the diligent work, and careful work that the Staff put in at the School. He really could not understand how any staff could have all the knowledge to carry out such a routine. And the absorbing power of the boys ! They must be human sponges if they could take in all that was put before them. (Laughter.) He was sure that so long as Mr. Matthews had charge of the School it would go on from strength to strength.

As for the Provost, he thought he had given one of the finest, most sincere, and deepest addresses the School had ever had. If they thought the address over and read the Provost's words afterwards, they would realize the deep waters he had got into and how important it all was. (Applause.)

The Archdeacon of Newark, seconding, said he had had a knowledge, and intimate knowledge, of the Provost for many years, and he took that opportunity of saying that that knowledge which he had gained had enabled him to feel for the Provost a friendship that had been shared by few people in the course of his (the Archdeacon's) long life. (Applause.) Of his many duties there was one which he ventured to say gave him the greatest possible delight and that was his duties for the benefit and advantage of the Minster Grammar School of Southwell. (Applause.)

The vote was carried with applause, the Provost briefly replying.

Dr. Willoughby thanked the Bishop and Mrs. Mosley for kindly lending them the hall for Speech Day, and the Bishop acknowledged.

School Plays and Players.

" Be the Players ready ? "

" They wait upon your patience."

The play season of this year was prolonged into the Spring Term. An excellent innovation which not only entertained us all, but also gave us an inkling of what we might expect in future productions.

No sooner had the curtain fallen upon Hamlet than two teams of rival players were being canvassed for an Easter show. Mr. Doy enlisted ' Ophelia ' and one First Player with two unknown quantities and began to rehearse Waterloo, while Mr. Ball signed on the Queen, before she grew too masculine, and collected a spirited group of hitherto untried players untried apart from Smee, and started The Grand Cham's Diamond.

If the third team had gone on with a Dickensian ' set ' there would have been no one left but our carpenters to occupy the stalls.

A word or two about Hamlet first. It would be unwise to institute comparisons between the Hamlet of 1934 and our production of 1928. Both were interesting and there were places in which the first production surpassed the last.

Hamlet was played on a quieter note by Mr. Matthews, a characteristic which may well have explained the love the common people bore towards him; he seemed to have the princely gift of popularity, and this was apparent in his easy chat with the players. He was gentler with Ophelia, a fact which deepened the pathos of her death. One new feature did he introduce—the whole of his self-reproach following the players' exit. This was kept in reserve till the first night to the no small dismay of the man with the prompt copy—if there was one. But what a gain to the part.

That outburst at the steps of the empty throne was 'a good thing.' Woodward's 'Ophelia' will be counted as a great achievement in our players' annals, though no more so than Tupper's in the same part. Ophelia must be difficult for anyone to play. I never quite understand that young lady. But there she is, poor thing, and I believe our young players have done the right thing by her, in giving her lines simply and unaffectedly and singing plaintively her snatches of old songs, so that the audience felt the pity of it.

As that is of the essence of tragedy, what more can we say? Mr. Doy was at home in his old part—the able man of action. The maturer player appeared in the great plotting scene with the young and heated Laertes of Robert Matthews.

Like all Stock Companies we have our players to suit the parts: here is Mr. Ball for a juvenile lead; Horatio, who but he, faithful recipient of Hamlet's endless observations with appropriate assent and support to the end; and here is a new-comer, Mr. Percy, an excellent Polonius, an intruding fool yet not without dignity.

The battlement scenes with Frank Barrett's Ghost were thrilling as they always are—even though the subterranean rumbles rumbled too continuously!

Critics know the part the grave-yard interlude plays in the heightening of the tragedy to follow. It needs restraint if the play is to be brought back to its true level and it achieved this in the end. A difficult scene as we know and yet carried through with dignity at last.

How great a play it is you can scarcely know till you have been bound up with it through much rehearsal and through successful nights of performance. A memorable production.

"WATERLOO"

By A. CONAN DOYLE.

Corporal Gregory Brewster (aged 96)	C. R. Heald
Norah Brewster (his grand-niece)	A. E. Woodward
Serjeant McDonald, R.A.	A. Caudwell
Colonel Midwinter, Royal Scots Guards	J. Wade

We all enjoyed Mr. Doy's production of Waterloo. Only those of us who had played in it perhaps realized how delicate a piece it is. I have heard an audience snigger when old Brewster dies and it made me feel hot all over. This competent little company played it with feeling, and, hardened though I am, there was just a tug at the old man's line: "I'm a straggler, that's what I am, a straggler." It was perhaps too much to expect the high level throughout a part that the great Irving enjoyed. Woodward's Norah was not so simple as she should have been. She made eyes sweetly at the gallant serjeant but I doubt if they lived happily ever afterwards in the 'married quarters.' But could Caudwell's smile soften Norah's managing manner? Wade's promotion from a Danish private to a Guards' Colonel was well deserved, if rapid.

A very pleasing comedy nicely played.

Followed by as rapid and rattling a play as our stage has ever seen, Mr. Ball's new-comers in The Grand Cham's Diamond.

In the absence of my programme I can assure you that Henry Hurst was Strube's 'Little Man' to the life, enjoying the excitements of a world entirely outside his experience at second hand. "I see it in the papers" and in his shirt sleeves and carpet slippers he escapes reality and brightens the dullness of a back-street evening, just as his blonde daughter escapes or seeks to escape from her normal life at the 'pictures.' Surely that young lady is not John Lee? But 'nothing ever happens' in this mean interior. Doesn't it? Crooks, cops, tecs, and a sinister diamond whose violent entry through a smashed window nearly wrecked the show, made 'Ma' Morris see the possibilities of Life with a capital L for one crowded quarter of an hour; dough and white lights in a S. American city for a brief moment light up her starved soul. To that red-haired mobsman, Smee, she presents a large and courageous front, undaunted by that clumsily held automatic.

But it was not to be. The diamond is claimed and gained by the Law. The Law may be a H'ass but surely it never was so perfect a clown as it appeared facially at least in Sweny. He is Polly's mysterious young man and he now takes the middle of the stage, pushes back his Derby hat, and says: "Scotland Yard? I am Scotland Yard." Whereat the action was held up for a minute by the clock, at least it would have been, had not the clock already stopped by the diamond in its works.

So we presume Polly married the Sleuth and life resumes its normality in that little John Citizen's house.

But you gave us a delightful evening. Thank you.

OLD PLAYER.

Rugby Football, 1934-35.

From a cursory glance at the table of results, it would appear that last season was far from being a successful one. However, if we go more deeply into the matter and make due allowance for circumstances, we shall see that in reality the season was one of great promise. Last year we were unbeaten, scoring a record number of points, and it was inevitable that most of the prominent members of that team were bound to leave us. It is almost a general rule that a very good school side is followed by, at least, an indifferent one as the task of team building has to be started all over again. This was the case with us. In the backs alone, we lost the services of Mason, Revill, Norfolk and Keetley, perhaps the most effective combination we have ever had. Amongst the forwards we particularly missed Cooper as well as other stalwarts of the previous season.

Thus we were left with no colours and very few experienced players round which to build a side. The natural outcome was that most of the new players were young and light, and we could find no one with the speed of our former three-quarter line. But as the season went on we had welded together a team that played with enthusiasm and energy, and although our actual successes were few we were never overwhelmed and some of the younger members showed great promise.

Hurst was the first to be awarded his colours and with this award went the captaincy of the XV. Although lacking in physique he proved himself to be a sound forward, a good hooker and a very capable leader. His example of unflinching courage and refusal to acknowledge defeat until the final whistle did much to inspire his new and inexperienced side. He was well backed up by Smee, Snaith and Bradley, the last two forming a very solid middle row in the set scrums.

Outside, St. Clair was the most noticeable player but he was too great an individualist to be of maximum value. He had real ability but his lack of sense of position often left gaps in defence and nullified good attacking movements. Caudwell was a sound outside-half, rather lacking in speed, who was unfortunate in not being completely fit for part of the season. With normal development he should be of the greatest service this year. Helmy was a useful right-wing who was hardly given the chances he deserved. He had the right idea of going for the line and was often difficult to bring down. As full-back, Burgon was efficient and plucky, his tackling being excellent, but he was rather slow.

The chief fault of the XV as a whole was its rather slack defence. The tackling was not sudden enough nor hard enough; too often an opponent was allowed to make an extra ten yards before he was brought down. Also, some of the side were too prone to indulge in 'scragging.' There is no room in schoolboy football for this type of defence; it is ineffective against good players, merely bullying if used against smaller opponents, distasteful to the spectator and a sure sign of slackness or lack of courage. Whatever the size or strength of the opposition, whether we are winning or losing, let us see much more of the sudden, low, hard tackle which is the very essence of the game.

The team was generally: Burgon; Allen, St. Clair, Helmy, Morris; Caudwell, Wade; Hurst, Smee, Barnes, Snaith, Bradley, Melton, Schumach, Naylor. Of whom at least eleven will be returning next term.

Hurst, St. Clair, Smee, Caudwell, Helmy, Snaith, and Bradley were awarded colours.

Thomas's won the House Cup without any difficulty, the other Houses provided very feeble opposition.

JUNIOR MATCHES.

Athletic Sports, 1935.

The sports were held on the cricket ground on Thursday, April 4th. The events were started in a snowstorm but the weather cleared up later on, although a cold wind blew across the ground right through the proceedings. Considering the conditions, the attendance of parents and friends was very good and the Old Boys' race attracted more competitors than usual.

There were no outstanding performances in the Senior events although there were several close finishes. Helmy with 16 points proved to be champion athlete, but he was rather fortunate in having reduced opposition owing to the indisposition of St. Clair and Smee who had to retire during the afternoon.

This meeting will long be remembered because of Lee's achievement in the Junior section. In each of the nine "under 14" events he secured first place, thus scoring a 'possible.' This record may some day be equalled but can never be broken. In addition, he was second in the 'under 15' hurdles, bringing his total up to 29 points. Thus he was a worthy winner of the Junior Victor Ludorum cup, which was presented by Mr. F. J. Dawes and awarded for the first time.

In the inter-house competition Thomas's were so strong that the result was a foregone conclusion.

At the close of the sports, Mrs. Edward Caudwell, wife of the President of the Old Boys' Society, presented the cups.

The winners were as follows:—

THE 'VICTOR LUDORUM' CUP (Senior).—Helmy (16 points).

THE 'VICTOR LUDORUM' CUP (Junior).—Lee (29 points).

We should like to take this opportunity of thanking the judges for carrying out their duties with their usual efficiency, thus adding to the enjoyment of another good meeting. They are also to be congratulated on 'pulling their weight' so effectively against the Old Boys, who were audacious enough to challenge them to a tug-of-war.

Rifle Club.

We, the Rifle Club, flourished as usual during the Autumn and Spring Terms, but suffered a decline and fall during the Summer when the open range proved too expensive.

We have now 30 members (19 boarders and 11 day boys). At the close of the Spring Term, we had a popular handicap competition open to all members of the Club. The handicaps were so arranged as to enable everyone to obtain a possible, if they shot according to their usual standard. The results of this competition were: 1st, Wilkinson, J. (100); 2nd, Hatton (99); 3rd, Morris (98). Our activities consisted mainly in attempts at improvement for we could not in any way hope to enter open or league competitions.

The highest score last School Year was made by J. Lee, with 98 points. This is a change, because since the Old Boys left, there have only been four boys in the 90's at all. Lee also was top of the averages with 83.28 points. Again, it was a surprise to see that only four boys managed to keep their averages in the 80's.

The officials of the Rifle Club for the School Year were as follows:—

President	The Head Master.
Captain	P. E. Morris.
Secretary	} C. A. Holbard, Esq.
Treasurer
Assistant Secretary	E. C. Dodd.

Cricket, 1935.

The weather plays such a large part in the making or marring of the summer game that once more we must remark on our good fortune as we had only one match cancelled through rain and were able to play right through in every other case. May was a deadly cold month and fielding sometimes bordered on the unpleasant, but it was fine and dry, the result being that wickets were fast and true. Never once did we experience anything approaching a sticky wicket and as the outfield was consistently on the side of quick scoring there was no excuse for low totals.

For the first time we were fortunate enough to be able to engage a professional, Reginald Whysall being our regular coach until the beginning of July when he left to take up another appointment. By that time serious practice was nearly finished and we were occasionally helped by that fine cricketer, German Whysall, brother of the famous 'Dodge.' He will be in charge at the beginning of next season. By much hard practice, we welded together a very creditable side and as only two are leaving next season's team should be definitely strong. K. B. St. Clair was Captain and was adequate in that capacity although the worries of leadership seem to have adversely affected his playing ability. He never really did himself justice though he played one or two innings of the greatest value to his side, notably at Kelham where he stayed in on a bad wicket for forty-five minutes, leaving the scoring to Caudwell who changed a possible defeat into an easy victory. Caudwell was the other old 'colour' left from last year and his form has been very inconsistent and rather disappointing. He stuck a bad patch at the beginning of the season and only once touched his fine form when he gave a fine display of hitting at Kelham.

J. U. Smee and R. C. Heald were the opening pair throughout the season and both were awarded colours after the High Pavement match. Smee continued to be of great value to his side and was associated with Morris in a second stand when, against Magnus, they added 141 for the second wicket. Unfortunately Heald did little subsequently to justify his award and his record in the latter half of the season was dismal.

P. E. Morris, who came to us from Retford, was undoubtedly an acquisition and he has made great strides since the beginning of term. He came with a great reputation as a wicket-keeper and improved every match. His abilities were recognized when he was chosen to play for the County Schools against the City Schools at Mansfield. There he showed the selectors that he was the best 'stumper' in the schools of Nottinghamshire and he was selected to play for the Notts. Schools v. Derbyshire Schools on the Derby County Ground, on July 29th. Besides being a 'keeper' of no mean order he is a batsman of great possibilities and ended the season brilliantly, his effort against the Old Boys being specially noteworthy. Unluckily, his form with the bat was not in evidence at Mansfield, where his innings occupied the minimum of time.

Of the other batsman, Lee is worthy of mention. On two occasions, he certainly saved the side, notably at Magnus and Henry Mellish. On the former occasion, he had the satisfaction of collecting a not out fifty. As he is not yet fourteen and already the best fieldsman in the eleven, he should be of great value for several years. The batting of the 'tail' has been of doubtful quality, the greatest disappointment being Schumach. At the nets he often plays superbly but in match play he is so nervous that he discards his natural forcing batsmanship and plays back to everything to his own undoing.

Pre-eminent amongst the bowlers was G. A. Sheppard, who was awarded his colours after the Old Boys' match. He is a left-arm slow bowler who has the temperament to suffer punishment and who can bowl a consistent length for long periods without tiring. If he continues to improve, he should prove an asset to any side. He has been well backed up by Allen and Clarke who have bowled with great spirit, although occasionally rather erratically. With greater physical development, both should become very useful bowlers of the fast-medium type.

Generally speaking, the fielding and team work has been excellent. Never in recent years has there been such keenness and precision in the field and, except for occasional lapses in the slips, the catches have been well taken. The following have played for the XI: K. B. St. Clair, A. Caudwell, J. U. Smee, R. C. Heald, P. E. Morris, G. A. Sheppard, Lee, Allen, Clarke, Schumach, Hurst, Dodd, Barnes, Woodward.

Thomas's were able to secure the House Cup without any serious opposition.

Lectures.

On January 25th, we had a most interesting lecture by Miss Eva Hasell on her Caravan Schools in the remote parts of Western Canada. Until we had heard Miss Hasell's adventures few of us can have known the dreadful isolation of many of our people in the West; mothers of families who had never spoken to another woman for over a year, children living in complete ignorance not only of religious teaching, but of any teaching at all, stepping back into the squalor of a backward race.

The Caravaners brought light to dark places and companionship to people in great loneliness. They kept touch by correspondence lessons with those families they come to know.

Miss Hasell's lecture was well illustrated showing some of the appalling conditions of track and derelict farms. Canada was not seen as a land of promise but at least the difficulties were known and being bravely tackled.

On February 22nd, the Rev. Ginever gave a lantern lecture on behalf of the Church Missionary Society. The lecturer covered a wide field showing how the introduction of modern life into more backward regions carried with it a great moral and spiritual responsibility. The lecture was followed by a big sale of books on life and adventure in other lands.

The Rev. G. L. Gosling, Secretary of S.P.C.K., visited the School on May 29th, and told us something of the work of this great organization. Specially interesting was the work of printing braille books and magazines.

Scouts and Cubs. Camp.

The principal activities have been training for camps. The Cubs met regularly through the Spring Term and have been learning the elements of Law in the Pack, and had a highly successful camp at Normanton in June.

The Troop, thanks to Mr. Ball's pioneer work, struck the best possible camping ground in the Ashop valley, Derbyshire.

Hagg Farm will be voted the ideal camping ground. Two hundred feet up above the Sheffield-Glossop road, tucked away amongst the oaks that broke the force of the wind and yet open to the moors, the tents were pitched on varying levels of good turf. The shoulder of the 'Peak' just showed beyond a fine ridge and from a point a little up the hill the ridge that runs from Hope to Mam Tor showed its interesting crest.

Camp started on August 3rd, but some time before that careful preparations had been made. Interest centred round a long chest that was being hammered together. This 'undertaking' took all the camp gear and provided us with a useful buffet and store in camp.

Mr. Ball took the high road and did some useful advance buying in Bamford, followed by the main-guard in a broad-beamed bus, eleven scouts and kit. Mr. Matthews, Group Scoutmaster, brought up the rear an hour later.

Space does not allow of a detailed log of the week's camping. It included a day's trek along the old Roman Track through Hope, then by the ridge to Mam Tor, and so to the new cave near Castleton.

Our rights to whatever ground game we could get furnished some excitement, particularly when a very young and innocent rabbit playing at circuses with Strong's trap got stuck in it.

The weather-beaten backwoodsmen who dispersed on August 10th to civilization had had a great experience. Scouts attending the camp were Smee, Snaith, Cant, France, Lee, Longdon, Schumach, Strong, Wade, Croft, Wood.

Old Southwellians' Society.

President: EDWARD CAUDWELL, ESQ.

The three annual reunions are now so firmly established and are so consistently successful that there seems little to report on them. The dance was held in the Assembly Rooms on Thursday, December 20th, and was very well patronized and much enjoyed. There was a festive feeling about the whole affair which was fostered by the introduction of Christmas pudding to the supper menu. The tables looked very gay with the different coloured crackers and paper hats of all sizes and shapes were much in evidence after the interval.

Once again the dinner was held at the Saracen's Head on the first Saturday in February. It was attended by nearly seventy members who so enjoyed it that the corresponding function for next year is fixed to take place in Southwell.

The cricket match against the School 1st XI was held in delightful weather on July 25th. At the luncheon interval the Bishop presented, on behalf of the Society, a silver tankard to A. H. Hickson in recognition of the fact that he had actually been an active member of the Old Boys' team after he had passed his eightieth birthday.

At the general meeting before the dinner the Hon. Sec. presented his report as follows:—

Mr. President and Gentlemen,

In presenting once again my annual report on the activities of the Society, I have no sensational tit-bits to thrill you, no failures to depress you; in fact, no outstanding features of any sort. The year has just been one of steady progress and the very fact that our reunions are now taken as a matter of course indicates that the Society is firmly established and is serving the purpose for which it was formed. It is customary for a Secretary to take such an opportunity as this to bring his 'grouses' to the notice of members. In this respect, I have done my share in former years and I feel now that my remarks have taken effect. So much so, indeed, that I have nothing adverse to say and will even pass over the failure of many members to return prompt replies to the circulars which are sent out.

The dinner last year was held at the Saracen's Head on February 3rd and the attendance was the largest that I can remember. Its success was a fitting conclusion to Mr. Sidney Kirkby's year as President and it was very gratifying to see that the great interest he had shown was rewarded by so large a muster to honour him as head of the Society. His enthusiasm has not abated in the slightest since he left office and his work as a committee-man has been extremely valuable. The only regret felt at this very pleasant function was the absence of the Bishop who was prevented from attending by a previous engagement. He is with us again this evening, as is also the Provost. Their almost unfailing attendance at the dinner shows that, as Governors, their interest is not solely in bricks and mortar but in the quality of human being that the School produces and their readiness to mix so intimately with the Old Boys demonstrates that they are not wholly disappointed with our products. Mr. Heald's catering was, as usual, excellent, and his reduced terms enabled us to make the dinner pay for itself and nothing had to be drawn from the Club funds to meet the cost of entertainment. This is as it should be and illustrates the advantage of holding the dinner in Southwell where the whole price of the ticket is not taken by the caterer. However, as you have to decide in a few minutes whether or not we go to Nottingham next year, I will say no more for the present.

The cricket match was held on July 26th when, for the first time for four years, the Old Boys were successful. The pavilion was filled at lunch and I am convinced that this reunion becomes more popular every year. Our "Grand Old Man," Mr. Hickson, was present but did not turn out as he is saving himself to lead a side of veterans against the School this summer in celebration of his eightieth birthday.

The experiment of holding an informal dinner and dance after the match was tried for the first time and was an unqualified success. It will doubtless be repeated with more careful organization this year.

The annual dance was held in the Assembly Rooms on December 19th and more than a hundred tripped the 'light, fantastic' to the strains of Bob Wilkinson's band. Turkey and Christmas pudding for supper was an innovation which was thoroughly appreciated, and to add to the festive atmosphere crackers were provided in the dining rooms. Altogether it was a most pleasant evening and the thanks of all members are due to Mr. H. A. J. Merryweather for his very efficient organization and to his lady helpers who left no stone unturned to make the dance the leading social function in Southwell during the winter season.

Previous to the School Sports, I sent out one hundred notices to members which resulted in a noticeable increase in the number of spectators and was responsible for a splendid 'field' in the Old Boys' race. If it is your wish, I will do so again and I hope as many of you as possible will turn up to encourage the present generation.

The School Fund has increased slowly. The most notable contribution was from Mr. William Lee, who sent a cheque for ten guineas for the provision of two battleship-teak garden seats for the School yard. These seats have been used for some months now and are a lasting memorial to the interest that Mr. Lee has always taken in his old school. Mr. F. J. Dawes, already a generous subscriber, has promised an additional cheque to cover the cost of a Cup for the Sports. That Cup will be purchased during the next few weeks and will be held annually by the boy who obtains most points in the 'under 14' events.

In conclusion, I would like to thank all those who have helped me in the work connected with the Society. The Nottingham members of the Committee, I would especially thank. They willingly forgo their evening meal and content themselves with a snack of bread and cheese, and are always ready to make the journey to serve your interests. It would be invidious to mention names, but I am happy in having round me so many sound Old Boys to whom I can go for advice in case of need. My fellow secretary, Mr. Gibson, has now entered the bonds of matrimony and, while we must heartily congratulate him, we realize that his residence in Nottingham prevents his being as active as formerly. However, if you should decide to hold any function in Nottingham his assistance would be very valuable.

I would like to thank you once again for the unique honour you conferred on me last year and to tell you how much pleasure it has given me to realize that I am one of you.

No doubt the Head Master will tell you later that your Alma Mater is in a very flourishing condition and that should inspire you to strengthen your bonds with your old school and preserve to the present and future generations the glory and estate that have already been yours.
